1. WELCOME FROM THE PUBLISHER

Greetings, Loyal Colleagues, Fabulous Friends and Cheering Fans,

Thank you to everyone who continues to spread the word about this enewsletter (our eleventh year of publishing!) by talking about it, forwarding it on to colleagues or recommending it to your collaborators.

For those who just signed on, "Borderbuster" is produced by author, speaker and educator Laurel Delaney -- herself a successful small business owner with more than twenty-five years of experience in taking on the world with her knowledge, products and services. Every month, Laurel briefs you on the basics in all aspects of running a global business -- from finding customers to keeping them, from shipping products to getting paid, from learning about a different culture to becoming a true global "netizen."

Many of the articles featured here are marked subscriber exclusive, which means they do not appear on the GlobeTrade.com site or Global Small Business Blog (http://borderbuster.blogspot.com) -- an added value for members only. If you are too busy to tackle everything here, reference the website or the blog to get your global dose for the month.

In our December issue, "Borderbuster" focuses on: how defense contractors are preparing for the challenges of foreign markets; why more than half of the world's $141.7 billion in cross-border acquisitions in the past year took place in Europe; and how Adidas implemented cloud-based procurement software in a multinational environment. Our special feature this month is "Designing For Foreign Cultures," by Laurel Delaney (refer to No. 6).

Contact Laurel with questions, complaints, sound-offs, contributions or compliments concerning "Borderbuster." She'd love to hear from you, so go on and make her day! Her e-mail address is Idelaney@globetrade.com (mailto:Idelaney@globetrade.com).

Let's revolutionize our thinking, get started, bust a border and go global!

Make the world your business in 2012, The Team at GlobeTrade.com

4. BUSINESS AND CULTURAL TIPS -- HAVE SOME FUN!

Subscriber Exclusive

Enjoy. And remember, there is no such thing as a universal attitude. These are guidelines, so if in doubt while visiting a foreign country or city, ask.

This month's focus: Dubai (United Arab Emirates)

Greetings: Dubai is home and host to visitors from around the world and is a melting pot of cultures, but the Arabic greeting 'al-salaam alaykum' (peace be with you) - (the reply will be 'wa alaykum e-salaam'/peace upon you) is always welcome and is a great icebreaker.

Never offer your hand to an Arab woman unless she offers hers first. Upon entering an Arab home, it's customary to remove your shoes. Make sure your socks are clean."

Clothing: Dubai's dress code is liberal, but dress modestly out of respect and save the beachwear for the beach.

Ceremony: Emiratis are open-minded, tolerant, and hospitable. Integral to that hospitality is the coffee ceremony. Always accept the tiny cup in your right hand—it's polite to drink at least three—and after finishing, gently shake the cup side to side; this is a signal that you've finished.

Manners: At meal times, your Arab hosts will be generous with portions, so forget calorie counting! Be prepared to sit in the traditional manner (on the floor); women should wear a long skirt. Try not to sit so that the soles of your feet are presented to another person; it's impolite. Food is eaten with the right hand but you may use your left to drink.

Smoking: If in Dubai during Ramadan, the holy month of fasting, remember not to smoke, eat, or drink in public from sunrise to sunset. Kids are an exception and can discreetly drink and eat as usual. Hotels keep eateries open for non-Muslims, as do some malls; your concierge can advise you.

6. HOW I WENT GLOBAL: ONGOING SERIES -- As featured on the About.com Import and Export Guide site: Laurel Delaney outlines five factors to consider when designing a product for a foreign audience. Forward this resource to anyone who might benefit from it.

Designing For Foreign Cultures by Laurel Delaney

When designing for other cultures, how do you know which colors to use that will resonate with a specific group? The wrong visual message can ruin the best global design strategies. Below are five factors to consider when designing for a multicultural (foreign) audience.

- 1. If you like it and everyone else in your company does, research and tweak it a bit and then go with it. For example, you can design a website for a client located in Japan and during your research find that pastel tones, which evoke harmony and softness, are everywhere -- from retail display windows to print ads. Yet, the client may have selected you to design his website because of your style (a blend of bright reds, blues, greens and pinks) to achieve a more vibrant American look for his company. Just be careful with your finished product. Does it conjure up the right emotion when Japanese people view it?
- 2. Color combinations and arrangements in other countries don't really matter unless they offend. The key to not offending people in another culture is to thoroughly research the market and learn to understand the people. A little secret: By juxtaposing the same color combinations in different arrangements, consumers can see what might appear to be different combinations but are in fact just different arrangements of the same combinations. Certain color combinations can suggest a consistency in meaning that can transcend boundaries.

- 3. Individual color choices differ from country to country. Whereas combining and arranging colors may not matter so long as you don't offend, selecting a single color does matter from country to country, especially depending upon how the color will be used. For example:
- In China, white would not be an appropriate color for a wedding. It is the color of mourning. If a bride chooses a white wedding gown, her parents would probably not allow her to get married.
- In India, even in Christian weddings, most brides wear white but it is usually relieved by at least a touch of another color. If a married woman wears unrelieved white in India, she is inviting widowhood and ...

"To the American People: Christmas is not a time or a season but a state of mind. To cherish peace and good will, to be plenteous in mercy, is to have the real spirit of Christmas. If we think on these things, there will be born in us a Savior and over us will shine a star sending its gleam of hope to the world." ~ Calvin Coolidge (1872-1933), American president. Presidential message given December 25, 1927.
